

Uniquely Exceptional

A Mediterranean-Style Home Is Unique and Unusual for Michigan

WRITER KAREN VANDER WERP • PHOTOGRAPHER STEVE SIMPKINS

darlene, an interior decorator, and Dave, a builder, were in need of an ongoing project to showcase their talents. When there was nothing more to recreate, remodel, expand or enhance in their existing home, building became the obvious option for this design/build team.

While touring a home in Florida, they discovered a perfect floor plan for their project. But, to implement this plan correctly, a perfect piece of property was required. It became Dave's mission to find this elusive location. He undertook taking daily excursions down side roads, through unknown areas and to new places of discovery. One day, on a property scouting trip, he found a 6-acre parcel on Bay Valley Golf Course that had just been put on the market. It was exactly what the couple was looking for and they purchased it the next day. The property offered accessibility, beauty and seclusion—the perfect building site for their unique home.

The combination of ideal floor plan and perfect setting gave way to an unparalleled opportunity of creativity. “We love the process of building, designing and finishing a home,” shares Darlene.

The Mediterranean-style house, a glorious space enhanced with noteworthy detail and commitment to excellence, quickly depicted that expression. It enveloped an entourage of architectural allure from its palladium and transom windows to columns, niches and varying ceiling heights. “Almost all the walls have a feature,” explains Darlene.

Red birch, walnut and mahogany were used for cabinetry and all is in its natural state, sealed only with a clear coat to protect its beauty, enhancing the color and grain. Trayed, coffered and barreled ceilings abound. The 8-foot tall interior doors, along with multiple arches, contribute to style and spaciousness.

This team artfully combined distinction of style with fresh ideas, the casual and the elegant. For example, the kitchen is complete with a warming drawer in the island, spice racks, double ovens, a lighted wood canopy over the bar area, and a display area over the cabinets. The master bath is accented with a Terrazzo marbled island with air bubble tub and walk-through shower. The master suite is ideal with its own laundry area and shoe closet.

The use of color, from subtle to impactful, was selected to lower ceilings, emphasize moldings and enhance style. The art of lighting is depicted in niches, under cabinetry, bath and kitchen toe-kicks and cove molding.

The exterior of the home also features carefully constructed and designed details. The stucco finish, stone walls and circle drive, are all to exact specifications. To take advantage of the perfect parcel, a large porch and outdoor living area are perfectly outfitted.

Visiting this uniquely styled home in Michigan is to experience a shared effort and exceptional standard of creativity. □
